The recently conducted survey on employment and unemployment (EUS) situation in India, 2011-12, conducted by the National Sample Survey Organisation (NSSO), has revealed reduced female engagement in paid economic activities, specifically in the rural areas. In other words, the data shows lesser number of rural women participating in the labour force thus contributing to a declining female labour force participation rate (FLPR) and declining women’s employment in India. However, this phenomenon of women retreating from the labour force appeared starkly in the employment estimates of the previous round of NSSO survey conducted in 2009-10, which brought into focus the issue of deterioration in the scenario of women’s work in the country. The 2009-10 NSSO EUS figures released in 2011 showed a sharp decline in the labour force participation rates (sum of employed and unemployed as a proportion of the total population) since 2004-05; the data revealed a decline in female labour force by almost 22 million in absolute numbers. The female LFPR declined from 44 percent to 40.2 percent between 2004-05 and 2009-10. Similar trends were observable for the female work participation rates (FWPR), which declined from 148.6 million to 127.3 million based on an older version of population numbers. Such methods created an anomaly in its absolute estimation of the population. Also, NSSO figures clearly show that total recorded population has been higher than the projected population. Therefore, comparisons in absolute number do not reveal the actual situation of employment-unemployment within the rural areas.

In such a scenario, it is important to understand the situation of overall employment trends over the Super period. While overall WPRs show a marginal decline from 42 percent to 39 percent between 2004-05 and 2009-10, the overall rate of growth of employment declined sharply from 3 percent in 1999-00/2004-05 to around a mere 0.1 percent over the period 2004-05/2009-2010. There has been an observed decline trend in the age overall employment growth rates in both rural and urban areas. The decline is once again among the working age cohort 15-59. When disaggregated by sex, between 2004-05 and 2009-10; the male WPRs have remained almost same at around 54 percent. The overall decline is led by female WPRs, which has been in paid work in rural areas. The data for urban areas have shown marginal improvement for both male and female workers. In terms of absolute numbers, there has been an increase by almost 13.9 million jobs in the last two years. However, such gains in absolute numbers have not translated into gains in the rate of growth of employment over the period. Also, the gains in absolute employment have been criticism due to estimation errors in the NSSO methodology (Abhishek Shaw, Comparing NSSO’s Employment Surveys: A Methodological Note, Economic & Political Weekly, July 27, 2013). The NSSO has been criticized for an overestimation of jobs by about 4 million based on an older version of population projection figures, which is an understimation by itself, to arrive at the numbers. Such methods created an anomaly in its absolute estimation of the population. Also, NSSO figures clearly show that total recorded population has been higher than the projected population. Therefore, comparisons in absolute number do not reveal the actual situation of employment-unemployment within the rural areas.

In 2009-10 EUS was conducted by the NSSO to counter the figures of 2009-10, which was a drought year and hence provided a dismal picture of employment generation in that period. So, ideally, the 2011-12 employment figures should be compared with 2004-05 estimates in order to understand the changes in employment-unemployment situation of the country. Such comparisons, however, have revealed a similar trend in overall employment rates, specifically and substantially for rural women work.

However, the 2009-10 EUS cannot be overlooked as certain eye-openers to rural employment generation has been highlighted in this round of the survey. The 2009-10 EUS revealed loss of female workers in the age group numbers. Such methods created an anomaly in its absolute estimation of the population. Also, NSSO figures clearly show that total recorded population has been higher than the projected population. Therefore, comparisons in absolute number do not reveal the actual situation of employment-unemployment within the rural areas. The Parliament is seeking to bring in a Judicial Appointments Commission (JAC) to replace the unconstitutional Collegium system. The present legal position is that once the Collegium makes a recommendation practically nothing can be done to change it. India will be among the few countries (if not the only country) where judges appoint judges! The Collegium system is a departure from the Constitutional mandate and I would call the system ‘unconstitutional’. The Parliament is seeking to bring in a Judicial Appointments Commission (JAC) to replace the unconstitutional Collegium system. until a few years ago, the onus of choosing a suitable career rested on students and their parents. Students made choices after consultation with their parents and teachers. However, today, we are living in different times; academic life is marked by information explosion, bewildering career options, peer pressure, financial stress, and competition and stress. In this backdrop, making the right career choice is a challenge. However, you can mitigate the challenge if you take the guidance of experts. Education counsellors or career counsellors can help you in making the right choice of career.

The role of counsellors

Education counsellors guide students in dealing with all kinds of challenges—big or small. They provide a wide range of services for character building and personality development. They work towards helping students inculcate discipline and effective study habits. These days, several educational institutions are hiring education counsellors to work with them fulltime. At schools, they are expected to help students with problems pertaining to behaviour, anxiety, depression, social skills, interpersonal relations, academic performance, bullying, peer pressure and so on. They collaborate with parents and teachers to support students going through crisis-situations like learning disabilities, separation of parents, separation from parents, death of a dear one and substance abuse. They provide support and help youngsters transform into fine professionals.

At colleges, education counsellors encourage students assess their abilities, explore their strengths and areas of improvement, plan career path, set priorities, improve soft skills, improve self-esteem and deal with relationship conflicts. They even guide them through their college life and work place. Apart from this, they also try to dispel fears, doubts, confusions and negative thoughts from students. They encourage them to develop a dynamic personality and transform into complete professionals.

A typical day in the life of an education counsellor is occupied by interviews, personality and aptitude tests for students, preparation of reports, follow-up discussions with parents and teachers, formulation of communication strategies, counselling and skill development sessions for students.

Skills Required

To begin a career as an education counsellor, you require relevant skills more than educational qualifications. You need to have a refined mind, mindset and skills of a counsellor. Mostly, you will be dealing with young people especially children and teenagers. Therefore, listening skills, psychological skills, empathy, objectivity, strong sense of ethics, positive outlook, commitment, patience, dedication and sensitivity are inevitable for the job. These skills will help you build rapport with young people and subtly steer them in the right direction. Strong communication skills, analytical skills, interpersonal skills and problem solving skills are indispensable. You also need to gain insights into the current job and career trends. A comprehensive database with the latest details of courses, colleges, eligibility and admission criteria, fee structures and scholarships can make your job easy. You should keep yourself updated with information on emerging career opportunities and scope, employment figures, salary statistics, other benefits and growth prospects in the respective fields.

Academic Qualifications

A degree in psychology, sociology or an allied field is essential for beginning career in the field of educational counselling. A Master’s degree in psychology or counselling or a PG diploma in guidance and counselling can improve your prospects further. You can follow it up with M.Phil or Ph.D. If you are interested in working with disabled students, you can pursue relevant courses from Rehabilitation Council of India and acquire a licence.

Opportunities

Educational counsellors find employment in schools, colleges, universities, coaching centres, technical institutes, overseas education consultancies, NGOs, rehabilitation centres and hospitals. After directions from CBSE for appointment of at least one full-time counsellor in every school, even schools that are not affiliated to CBSE are following them. Remuneration for fresh graduates in any of the above options is quite decent. Another option is private practice. Here, your remuneration is directly proportional to your qualifications, experience and reputation. Some counsellors charge a few thousands per hour also. After gaining sufficient expertise in the profession, you can explore options like conducting seminars and writing articles or books.

If you are interested in listening to people, especially children and helping them work out a solution to their problems, then education counselling might be the right career for you. It is one of the most demanding but rewarding career options. More importantly, it gives immense satisfaction to see an anxious young person walk out of the room at the end of the session, walk out of the room with a smile!

Appointment of Judges... Continued from page 1 of the previous page... The Bill seems to be a step in the right direction. According to the draft Bill, the JAC will consist of the Chief Justice of India, two senior most justices of the Supreme Court of India, Union Minister for Law and Justice, two eminent persons nominated by collegium comprising of Prime Minister, Chief Justice of India and Leader of Opposition in the House of People. The Chief Justice of India shall be the ex-officio Chairperson of the Commission and the Secretary to the Government of India in Department of Justice shall be the convener of the Commission. The composition of the Commission seems to be well balanced.

The functions of the Commission shall be to recommend persons for appointment to the Supreme Court, Chief Justices of High Courts and Judges of High Court. The Commission also shall recommend transfer of Chief Justices of High Courts and Judges of High Courts from one High Court to another. The Commission should also ensure that the person recommended is of ability, integrity and standing in the legal profession.

In the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Bill, it is rightly pointed that the proposed Bill would enable equal participation of Judiciary and Executive, make the system of appointments more account- able, and thereby increase the confidence of the public in these institutions.

The Bill seems to be a bold step from the part of the Government to make the judiciary more accountable and efficient. As of now, the appointment of judges by the collegium is shrouded in secrecy and the JAC seeks to remove this. Nepotism and favouritism in judicial appointments have long been a matter for great controversy. The JAC will go a long way in checking such nepotism and favouritism while ensuring greater transparency in the appointment of judges. The Collegium system which was established with an indirect result of repressive Executive in the 1970s and 1980s has lost its significance in the current times when the Judiciary has successfully reasserted its independence.

I ndia’s first dedicated military satellite GSAT-7 was launched from French Guiana on 26 April 2013 by Ariane Space from Kourou French Guiana, will provide the Navy with an almost 2,000-nautical-mile wide coverage over the critical Indian Ocean region (IOR).

As planned, ISRO’s Master Control Facility (MCF) at Hassan in Karnataka started acquiring the signals five minutes prior to the separation of GSAT-7 from Ariane-5 launch vehicle. The satellite has been deployed and they are generating power. Initial checks have indicated normal health of the satellite.

Essentially a geo - stationary communication satellite, GSAT-7 will be able to cover almost 70% of the IOR,” said a source. The “over-the-sea-use” Rukmini, with UHF, S, Ku and C-band transponders, is to be followed
